Sayyid Al-Hakeem Meets Arab Women Leaders Delegation, Highlights Women’s Role to Enhance Stability, Social Progress

Sayyid Ammar Al-Hakeem, Head of the National State Powers' Alliance, met with a delegation of Arab women leaders from various fields. The discussion focused on the political and humanitarian landscape in the Arab world, as well as the current dynamics of regional dialogue. His Eminence emphasized the central role of women in Arab and Islamic societies, describing them as both half of society and the nurturers of the other half. H.E. underscored the importance of empowering women across all sectors, noting their vital contribution to social cohesion and long-term stability.

Sayyid Al-Hakeem pointed out that Iraqi women enjoy a constitutional quota that guarantees them effective political representation. H.E. called for further empowerment on legal, constitutional, and social levels, while also preserving sound cultural values and customs. H.E. stressed the importance of showcasing the success stories of women across the Arab and Islamic worlds.

H.E. also highlighted the exceptional recovery and stability Iraq is currently experiencing, noting that many provinces have transformed into large-scale hubs of development across multiple sectors—demonstrating the resilience and determination of the Iraqi people in overcoming challenges and driving progress.
